Workplace Spanish

The Workplace Spanish programs are built on the premise that language learners become more motivated if their learning experience correlates to immediate life application. In these programs, the Spanish learning activities are centered on employees' specific job functions. Focus is given to building workplace vocabulary and conversational practice is centered on relevant industry topics that build language skills most necessary for the environment in the employee's current workplace. The Workplace Spanish series of courses are designed to teach functional Spanish to facilitate communication between English and Spanish-speakers. Courses cover greetings, introductions, employment issues, scheduling, work rules, safety issues, site supervision, time, speed, and quantity expressions. It focuses on language relevant to specific occupations in a highly interactive, situation based classroom. Material can be customized for many occupations.

Custom training is available for many occupations including:

- Police officers
- Firefighters
- Paramedics/EMTs
- Nurses
- Banking personnel
- Office workers
- Construction workers
- Manufacturing workers
- Retail
- Hospitality
- Warehousing

Programs are all non-grammar based, focusing instead on repetition of key words and phrases. No previous Spanish experience is necessary. Students learn generic Spanish terms understood by most Spanish speakers and relevant to their specific type of work. Workplace Spanish noncredit classes eliminate the tedious grammar instruction found in most other language programs.

To schedule a free consultation regarding Workplace Spanish training for your organization, please call Bob Duke at 520.494.6051.

Silver Screen Cowboys, From Film to Television

With the coming of television in 1949, the silver screen cowboys such as Hopalong Cassidy, Gene Autry, Roy Rogers, The Cisco Kid, and The Lone Ranger made their way to the new medium. Some had an easy time of it, while others were fought at every turn by the film studios that were desperate to keep their stars off the small screen. The motives behind the big film studios were varied, but in the end, many of our cowboy heroes overcame these obstacles. However, there were a few that fell by the trail into supporting roles or obscurity. Learn the fascinating true stories behind the silver screen cowboys that blazed the trail for Gunsmoke, Bonanza, Laramie, Maverick, Cheyenne and all our favorite adult television westerns that came later.

Basic Landscape Irrigation Guidelines

This course is intended for homeowners, new hires with landscaping companies, material supplier employees and others interested in learning the basics of landscape irrigation systems. PowerPoint presentations, down-to-earth lectures, and real-world product examples are utilized. Several working model controllers (timers in layman's terms) are used to give students some "hands-on" experience. The importance of reasonable but regular system monitoring and repair is stressed, both in the interest of saving water and of maintaining a healthy desert landscape. Select "war-stories" from real world irrigation projects are presented to support key points and to connect the design and installation concepts described.

Beginning Landscape Irrigation Design

Upon completion of this class, the student should be able to design either an overhead sprinkler or drip system for a residential project. To become competent in irrigation design, years on the drawing board and in the ditch are required to achieve professional results and provide the client with a durable, practical and "smart" system that does the job. The goal is to give the student the basic design "tools and rules" as a solid foundation for the next step, depending on the individual's choices. This course assumes the student has landscape industry experience and preferably some irrigation installation experience. No CAD design program is used in this class; the "old-school" T-Square, drawing board, compass and scale are the tools used. It is important to recognize that the basic "old-school" drafting and design methods, once mastered, will enable you to move forward to an irrigation or landscape CAD program much easier and quicker. Special Note: Students will need some basic drafting tools and a small drawing board.

Basic Landscape Irrigation Guidelines

This course is intended for homeowners, new hires with landscaping companies, material supplier employees and others interested in learning the basics of landscape irrigation systems. PowerPoint presentations, down-to-earth lectures, and real-world product examples are utilized. Several working model controllers (timers in layman's terms) are used to give students some "hands-on" experience. The importance of reasonable but regular system monitoring and repair is stressed, both in the interest of saving water and of maintaining a healthy desert landscape. Select "war-stories" from real world irrigation projects are presented to support key points and to connect the design and installation concepts described.

Beginning Landscape Irrigation Design

Upon completion of this class, the student should be able to design either an overhead sprinkler or drip system for a residential project. To become competent in irrigation design, years on the drawing board and in the ditch are required to achieve professional results and provide the client with a durable, practical and "smart" system that does the job. The goal is to give the student the basic design "tools and rules" as a solid foundation for the next step, depending on the individual's choices. This course assumes the student has landscape industry experience and preferably some irrigation installation experience. No CAD design program is used in this class; the "old-school" T-Square, drawing board, compass and scale are the tools used. It is important to recognize that the basic "old-school" drafting and design methods, once mastered, will enable you to move forward to an irrigation or landscape CAD program much easier and quicker. Special Note: Students will need some basic drafting tools and a small drawing board.
