Patient Health Advocate (PHA)

Recent changes in healthcare in the United States have created new career opportunities in community health, healthcare and mental health. A new position, the Patient Health Advocate, works as a patient support agent and liaison between patient, provider and other healthcare team members to support health and wellness and obtain the optimal delivery of care.

Clark College's Patient Health Advocate training will prepare you to work in this new role and equip you with relevant, cutting edge skills, including:

- ❖ Training for serving as a community health worker, health navigator, case manager or care coordinator
- ❖ Background information on wellness, mental health, chronic and acute health problems
- ❖ Methods to assist the client with communication, understanding and coping with disease or injury, including coaching, advocacy and facilitation
- ❖ Knowledge of the interpersonal, team and intercultural skills needed to effectively work with patients and support them in making changes necessary for improved health
- ❖ Tools for working with clinicians, social workers, insurers and key hospital staff, including communication and documentation skills
- ❖ Knowledge of community resources, health and behavioral health services and how to successfully navigate systems
- ❖ Understanding of the importance of patient-driven care and how to involve, educate and inform families, caregivers and the medical team to effectively coordinate better health outcomes for the patients

"Fear No Math"

Are you "afraid" of mathematics? You are not alone! Does the very thought of taking a math course, or, even worse doing math homework or taking a math test make your forehead and palms sweat? Do those thoughts make you generally uneasy; make you wonder how you might just skip it; even ruin your day? If so, it's likely you have math anxiety. It's clearly time for you to take control of the subject and come to understand that it's much easier than you think. You are actually better at the subject than you think (which is a fundamental element of the problem). Age 15+.

Social Media

Business Blogging

Are you a small business owner? You've likely been told by your web developer that blogging is an essential component of search engine marketing. Ready to blog? If so, you don't want to miss this! If you're interested in learning where to blog, what to blog, and how to blog, as to maximize your visibility online, then this course is for you. In this short three-day course, Mickler shows you how to set up a blog, add content, and how to tailor the content to make it organically-relevant to search engines; and no technical mumbo-jumbo: it'll be easily understood, applied, and executed.

Ethics in Social Media

Social Media introduces our employees to a hyper-reality of interconnected people, ideas, and concepts. Too often, employees may divulge information damaging to company brand or professional image; too often, employers may lack an analytical framework to gauge the appropriateness of content, or, a strong policy that governs Social Media activity. This course explores the difference between traditional and social media, explores some of the ethical problems of hyper-reality, constructs an ethical analytical framework to evaluate reasonable content, and helps business leaders craft a Social Media Acceptable Use Policy to share with their employees.
